For Your Information*Evacuation Preparedness for Pet Owners:

It is recommended that you take your pets / animals with you, if at all possible. Livestock may be left, but some arrangements should be made to move them under certain conditions. Animal owners need to develop their evacuation plans before an emergency strikes. Identify individuals / groups who may be able to help you evacuate your animals / pets; and maybe willing to foster them. More information is available on: <http://www.avianweb.com/evacuation.html>.

- Please subscribe / register to the Animal Evacuation / Rescue Group: <http://groups.yahoo.com/group/animalrescueandevacuation> to identify people able and willing to evacuate your pets and / or foster homes; and to get assistance in coordinating your evacuation.

Should you be able to take your pets with you, you will need the following items:

- Carrying cages
- Any medications your pets are on
- Food / Water
- First aid supplies
- Pet Identification (ownership records, photographs)

For detailed information on animal evacuation, contact the local animal control, humane shelter, or veterinarian. A toll-free number for a Public Information Phone System may be activated by the state Emergency Preparedness Division during an evacuation. The number will be announced early in an emergency evacuation and will connect callers with volunteers to answer specific animal evacuation questions.

Evacuation Preparations for Horses / Livestock

Review your property, checking for wind and rain protection, flood risk areas, security fencing or debris that could be blown by high winds. Maintain communication with at least one person who will know where you and your animals will be. More detailed information is available on: <http://www.avianweb.com/evacuation.html>.

Mark your animals with clear identification -- tags, microchips, tattoos, leg bands or spray paint/permanent marker with your telephone number. Maintain permanent health and identification records in a safe place. Take them with you if you evacuate.

Decide early as to whether you will take animals with you or prepare to leave them on the farm. Check with local veterinarians and local emergency management officials for help in this decision.

- Leave 48-72 hours of water and feed for animals left behind. Move livestock to the highest ground if you expect flooding or leave gates open from pastures and paddocks to the high ground so animals will not be trapped in low areas.

Identify individuals / groups who can transport and/or shelter animals during an emergency. Plan to leave early in an evacuation, if you take animals. Do not get on the road late when high winds make it more dangerous for your travel and may place others in danger as well.
